

THE DAILY CHRONICLE

SUNDAY, MARCH 9, 2025

Today is Meatball Day. Meatballs have a long history, with recipes appearing in ancient Chinese, Arabic, and Roman texts. From Italy's polpetta to Sweden's köttbullar, many cultures have their own version of this culinary treasure.

Did You Know?

Approximately 10 percent of the global population is left-handed, a trait influenced by a combination of genetic and environmental factors. While the relationship between handedness and brain hemisphere dominance is complex, left-handed individuals are sometimes associated with skills like creativity and spatial awareness. Despite their minority status, left-handed people have made remarkable contributions throughout history, with figures like Leonardo da Vinci and Albert Einstein excelling in art and science.

Where Am I?

I am celebrated for my diverse cultural heritage, particularly French, Spanish, and Creole. A lively city, renowned for my bustling streets, vibrant buildings adorned with wrought-iron balconies, and the sound of jazz pouring from bars and clubs, I have produced legendary musicians like Louis Armstrong. I am situated along the Mississippi River, and at my core lies the historic French Quarter. My annual festival is famous worldwide, with parades, costumes, and an abundance of beads filling the streets. Where am I?
